Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, said, "SALT is dead. The SALT treaty no longer exists." His statement appeared aimed at clarifying remarks made by President Ronald Reagan during a news conference Wednesday might that happarently softened the U.S. position on the unratified 1979 Strateeic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Under repeated questioning, Mr. Reagan refused to say definitively if the United States would go over the treaty limits.

His reluctance contrasted with his announcement last month that it made no sense for the United States to abide by what he called a "fatally flawed" treaty while, he said, the Soviet Union violated it.

Mr. Reagan said then that he would go ahead later this year with deployment of the 131st B-52 bomber equipped with cruise missiles, putting the United States over

"We want to follow up on that," he said, adding, "If nothing is done, then we'll make the decision with regard to that plane."

Mr. Speakes said Thursday, however, that it would be coincidental if future decisions kept the United States within the limits of SALT-2. "It won't be for reasons that they are SALT limits but because of Seviet behavior." he said cause of Soviet behavior," he said.

"Any decisions we make on arms reduction will be based on Soviet behavior in three key areas," Mr. Speakes said. He listed them as the Geneva arms negotiations, Mos-cow's military build-up and alleged Soviet violations of arms pacts.

Mr. Speakes said there had been "more arms control activity" in Moscow recently, pointing to a Warsaw Pact proposal for a reduc-tion in troop levels in Europe as well as a Soviet plan given Wednesday to the United States in Geneva to limit long-range strategic weap-

Soviet Has Plane Based in Nicaragua To Fly Reconnaissance, U.S. Asserts

WASHINGTON - The White House bas said that a Soviet reconnaissance plane based in Nicaragua had been flying missions there to help the Sandinist government. This is the first time that a Soviet photo reconnaissance aircraft has been based in Nicaragua," Edward P. Djerejian, a White House spokesman, said on Wednesday. He said the plane carried "Soviet Aeroflot markings and presumably is being flown by Soviet pilots."

U.S. officials expressed certainty that the plane's crew was largely or entirely Russian. The announcement came hours

Over the weekend, administration officials said that the Soviet Union had resumed direct arms shipments and that a sizable delivery of military supplies was made by a Soviet freighter in early May.

Officials said President Ronald Reagan was to make the announcement Wednesday night during his nationally broadcast news conference but was uowittingly upstaged hy Mr. Casey.

After the central intelligence di-rector told the legislators in the afternoon, several members of Congress who attended the briefing discussed the comments with reporters, who then sought clarification from the White House, Late Wedoesday, the White House issued its statement.

"A Soviet AN-30 photo reconnaissance aircraft has been recently identified in Nicaragua. The air-craft was seen at Sandino loternatiooal Airport in early May 1986," Mr. Djerejian said.

"The aircraft carries Soviet Aeroflot markings and presumably is being flown by Soviet pilots. This is the first time that a Soviet photo reconnaissance aircraft has been hased in Nicaragua. It called for a series of major technical and managerial changes at the space agency that seem certain to cause additional delays.

Experts say the report made it clear that NASA would be faced with a far more complicated task than simply redesigning and testing new safety seals, on the shuttle's solid-fuel booster rockets.

The panel also called for such costly and time-consuming tests as a full-scale, vertical firing of the redesigned booster rocket.

France Cancels Plan For Rhine Cleanup

PARIS - France has notified the Netherlands it cannot fulfill a 1983 pledge to reduce pollution of the Rhine river by injecting waste salt from potassium mines in Alsace into the ground. But a French spokesman promised the International Rhine Commission that an alternative would be found by January 1987.

France was the last of five countries to ratify a 1976 agreement with West Germany, Switsectand, the Netherlands and Lexembourg to clean up the Rhine. The ratification ended a seven-year controversy between France and the Netherlands, which has been hit hardest by pollution of the river.

All Will Know Why

The gradual warming of Earth's surface threatens incalculable damage to the present balance of life. It is the result of air pollution -- a massive accumulation of carbon dioxide in the upper atmosphere, aggravated by the addition of other gases that are destroying the ozone layer. Testimony this week before a U.S. Senate subcommittee suggests that temperatures are rising faster than previous forecasts had shown. It is a powerful argument for increased reliance worldwide on ouclear power.

When people burn coal gas or oil to generate electricity, they can get some of the pollutants out of the smoke, but the carbon dioxide is inherent. As the 4 billion people of the Third World press toward standards of living more closely approaching those enjoyed by the industrial countries' 1.1 billion, they are going to make and use more electricity. Perhaps the best reason for the United States to provide nuclear technology to China is the American interest in holding down the amount of coal smoke that, in their relentless drive to industrialize, the Chinese pour into the wind.

The warming gives further urgency to energy conservation, a cause that has become less fashionable in a time when oil tanks are full to the brim. America has done a lot in the past dozen years to bold down the amount of fuel it burns, but it will have to do a lot more - and oot only America.

is going to be hard to organize. Most of the world still uses chlorofluorocarbons in aerosol sprays, although governments have known for some years that minute amounts of those gases greatly aggravate the green-house effect. One useful response to the rise in carboo dioxide is to plant more trees. But the countries whose forests are now being cut and cleared -most of them are close to the Equator - have few resources for that kind of work. Here is a thought to chill the hearts of Senators Gramm, Rudman and Hollings: if the United States wants to try to stabilize its climate, perhaps it is going to have to lay out serious amounts of money to support conservation and reforestation in Africa and South America.

If present projections are correct, danger lies ahead within the lifetime of most of the world's present population. By the 2020s, according to computations by NASA, average temperatures in the United States will have risen 9 degrees Fahrenheit. That would be the most severe swing in climate since the end of the last Ice Age. The effect on food supplies is incalculable.

What is likely to be the world's reaction to these warnings? Not much, at first. But as people begin to see the signs of this change in climate, they will know what is happening, and why.

Support for Mexico

The Mexican peso has been falling erradcally, signaling renewed troubles in the country's economy. The immediate causes are rising inflation and capital flight. Behind that looms the price of oil and the effect of its drop on a country that had become crucially dependent on it.

Mexicans are reportedly again discussing some sort of limit or moratorium on payments of interest on their foreign debts. That could provide a measure of relief in the very short term, although it would not be likely to last long. The greatest strain is cot in Mexico's foreign payments, but in its domestic budget. The decrease in oil prices has cut budget revenues by ooe-fourth since the beginning of the year. Mexico's deficit is now, in proportion to its economy, more than twice as large as that of the United States - and even harder to cut, for Mexico is oow falling into another severe recession.

Mexico will oeed new loans again this year, and the oegotiations are proving unusually difficult. The IMF will not provide more money until the Mexicans agree to reduce their budget deficit further. Uotil the IMF resumes lending, the commercial banks are reluctant to provide more money.

The Reagan administration, recognizing the dire character of Mexico's circumstances, is evidently trying to put an end to the recent spate of inflammatory and inac-curate attacks oo Mexico. David C. Mulinternational affairs, observes that the Mexican government has already taken a oumber of important and, in political terms, unpleasant measures to strengthen the economy. "These difficult steps have not been given the recognition they deserve," he has told a subcommittee chaired by Senator Jesse Helms — the same panel that last month elicited wild testimooy from other administration officials about drugs and corruption in Mexico. The Treasury appears to have decided oot to assist Senator Helms in his vendetta against Mexico.

Mexico's boom ended abruptly four years ago when it ran out of money to meet its debts abroad, and since then Mexicans have been through a harsh period of recession and adjustment. Last year, diligence and patience seemed to be paying off with a return to growth and stability. Then oil prices broke, "Coming as it did after four years of economic adjustment," Mr. Mulford said, "this traumatic contraction was not only economically painful but politically demoralizing." Mr. Mulford was letting the Mexicans know that their exertions do oot pass unnoticed. Unfortunately, there is still a great deal for them to do, none of it easy. But the implication is that, as long as they continue to work in good faith, they can expect support from the United States.

Spying Among Friends

No, it is oot some "anti-Israeli" cabal in Washington that wonders whether Israel has yet made a clean breast of its espionage against the United States. Neither is it some group of naifs who think friendly governments oever snoop oo each other. The issue in American eyes is limits, which the Israelis, in their understandable embarrassment over the Pollard affair, do not yet recognize.

The State Department, vaguely supported by the White House, says it is satisfied that Israel pursues oo "official" espionage and that it has cooperated properly in the Pollard investigation. The Justice Department and FBI complain of only "selective" cooperation that leaves them uncertain about the extent of Israel's spying.

Jonathan Jay Pollard has pleaded guilty to spying for Israel on an indictment that implicates four Israeli co-conspirators, including Rafael Eitan, an intelligence veter-an, and Brigadier General Aviem Sella, a senior air force commander. As described in court, their involvement with Mr. Pollard was so extensive that it is hard to credit Israel's claim that its officials conducted an unauthorized, "runaway" operation.

The espionage was, bowever, initiated by Mr. Pollard and conceivably lacked the approval of the highest officials in Jerusalem. If so, and if maintaining paid spies in the United States is a clear violation of Israeli policy, why have the main co-conspirators been moved on to positions of stature and continuing trust? The question intersects with a currently hot issue inside Israel - the extent to which Prime Minister Shimon Peres may lack complete control over domestic intelligence.

Mr. Peres and his cabinet say they aided, the Pollard prosecution, do oot countenance spying in America and want the matter resolved without further damage to relations. The State Department agrees, but the FBI, presumably eyeing other suspect Israeli dealings, is pressing for more informa-tion. Mr. Peres condemns this badgering as an effort to "foul the atmosphere." His defense minister says that American officials are "out to get Israel."

Israel's leaders seem to underestimate the revulsion among Americans about the Pollard affair. Israel's warmest friends were shocked by the suborning of a U.S. intelligence official and by his generous pay from a government heavily subsidized by Americans. They think intelligence operations between friends should stop short of sponsoring treason by the citizens of the other country. If Israel accepts that distinction between its own agents' snooping and the suborning of treason, let it join in a clear policy declaration to that effect. If for some reason of vital security it ever felt com-pelled to cross that line, let it explain those old fears, and the circumstances, and firmly close this chapter of mistrust. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Toward a Freer South Korea?

South Korea's Nadonal Assembly is meeting in a special session that could determine the course of that country's internal poliocs for years to come. The purpose is to create a bipartisan committee to draft a new consolution, one that opposition groups insist must assure a more direct popular voice in national poliocs. If the effort succeeds, it could open the way to constitutional change well in advance of the scheduled 1988 presidential election. If it fails, antigovernment violence is likely to increase, inviting even greater political repression.

There are signs that both the government and the main moderate opposition group, the New Korea Democratic Party, are alarmed by the more radical trend that demonstrations have taken lately. In the last few weeks, rallies staged in major cities by the NKDP have ended in violent clashes between small groups of extremists and the police. Since late April, four students have committed suicide — three of them by self-immoladon — in acts of political protest. The special National Assembly session will be considering more than constitutional change. What it does is also likely to go far in deciding whether South Korea is to have a placid or a troubled future. - The Los Angeles Times.

Thatcher Totters but Where Is Labor?

LONDON — The "chicken American" phe-nomenon and President Reagan's conditional decision to abandon the SALT-2 arms limits have come at a had time for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. They have made ber loyalty to Mr. Reagan and to the United States seem unrewarded, which allows her critics to say that she has been used and abused by Washington. Mrs. Thatcher's government is in serious diffi-culties; the press and the political class, vocationally morbid, are convinced that its end draws near. What is interesting, though, is that there seems nothing except another Conservative government to take its place. The Labor Party does very well in polls but remains gravely divided internally. There is every reason to doubt that it is in a condition to win a general election.

The Alliance of Social Democrats and Liberals is handicapped by an electoral system in which the winner takes all and good seconds count for zero. And it is divided, notably on whether Britain should maintain its nuclear deterrent.

There are two reasons for the Conservative vernment's decline — for "the smell of death" that has gathered around it, to quote Peter Jen-kins of The Sunday Times.

The first is that its programs, conscientiously applied, have failed to put the economy convinc-ingly on the way back to health. The recovery that began in 1981 is faltering. Unit labor costs are much above those in competitor countries, according to the OECD's analyses, while real wages have continued to rise more rapidly than in the other major industrial nations. The public, incloding the Conservative Party's supporters, has become increasingly troubled by a deterioration in schools and health services.

The second cause of Mrs. Thatcher's difficulties is that she is losing the party's confidence. Her manner of governing has been to work closely with a kitchen cabinet of unofficial advisers and to deal arrogantly with the real cabinet. In the British system that can work while the government is a success. When the government is not, it doesn't. The cabinet is made up of people of independent authority, who have their own skins to save; and the Tory party itself has never displayed much computation about tidding it-self of potential election losers. Labor's new leader, Neil Kinnock, has made his party a great deal more attractive to middleclass voters than it has been in recent years. It nonetheless remains the prisoner of the British trade union movement, whose bloc votes domi-nate its conventions and platform. It remains under a powerful and politically baleful influ-

Labor's problems are suggested by figures recently published on individual memberships. Of 313,000 individual members, nearly half—140,000—are described as "unwaged." That is, they don't have a job. It is quite possible that some of these "unwaged" declare themselves as such in order to pay cut-rate does to the party. It is also true that active members of a party are not is also true that active members of a party are not necessarily representative of those who vote for it. It nonetheless is hard to disagree with the writer in the Daily Telegraph who said recently that the party's membership "must now be stupendously untypical of the nation as a whole, further estranged than ever not only from the professed and business classes but also from defilled and transpired and statement and business."

skilled and supervisory workers."
This is reflected in the party leadership's difficulty in purging Trotskyists who have become a force in the trade union movement and in many local Labor Party organizations.

In the United States, the wild men and women tend to be on the right these days - survivalists, gnu-nuts, conspiracy theorists — but these have only recently taken up "entryism" and tried to take over local elements of the major party orga-nizations, as the Lyndon LaRouche people have done in Illinois and California.

In Britain today, the wild ones are mostly on the left, and the Labor Party, its programs and its governing committees are what they have strug-gled, with considerable success, to influence. They devote time and energy to the job, and as a result have much more effect on Labor's affairs than their numbers would warrant. This continues to put off the moderate voters occessary to put Labor once again into oational power.

Labor also suffers from the defection of a part of its old constituency and moderate leadership to the Social Democratic Party, formed five years ago, which subsequently formed an alliance with the venerable Liberal Party. There is an invalid government in London, without an apparent successor. Politics abhor-ring a vacuum, that will not last. The odds are that the Tories will succeed themselves, but that they will also, in all decent or possibly indecent haste, push Mrs. Thatcher aside. That is bypothesis. A certainty is that she won't go quietly. International Herald Tribune. O Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Bowles: Ignoring Prophets Is a Dangerous Habit

By Charles William Maynes

WASHINGTON—The death on May 25 of Chester Bowles, prominent diplomat from the Kennedy era, prompts a troubling question: Why does America so consistently punish its prophets and reward its timeservers and knaves? In the Kennedy administration Mr. Bowles, as undersecretary of state, was the only figure of substance to oppose the Bay of Pigs invasion, which was a total disaster. He had successfully lobbied against U.S. in-tervention in the Dominican Republic after the assassination of President Rafael Trujillo in 1961.

His reward for being right twice was President Kennedy's conclusion that Mr. Bowles was more comfortable with large ideas than with operational specifics. Mr. Bowles was therefore exiled to India as ambassador, a position in which he served with great distinction until the Nixon administration took office.

In subsequent administrations this pattern of making certain that no ished has continued. Elliott Richardson, attorney general in the Nixon administration, took the view, after the court had ruled that President Nixon had to turn over tape recordings of key con-versations held within the White House, that the president could not defy the law. Mr. Richardson resigned. He received 3 million letters and telegrams approving his princi- 1960s Daniel Patrick Moynihan, then pled stand, but he failed to receive a in the Johnson White House, called attention to the alarming disintegra-tion of the black family in America. The vituperation he received from the single appointment in subsequent

In recent weeks the media have announced the naoonal rehabilitation of Richard Nixon, who is oow invited to lecture before some of the diences in America. Meanwhile, George McGovern, who did not break the law, mislead the American people or disgrace the office of the presidency, is unable to be elected the president of St. John's College in Annapolis, Maryland.

Powerful members of the American Jewish community never forgave Mr. Ball - although, after the calamitous Israeli invasion of Lebanon and the corruptive effect of U.S. aid on the Israeli economy there must be some with second thoughts.

The record, in short, is troubling.
People like Mr. Bowles and Mr. Vance, who showed courage and wisdom, were driven out of Washington. Mr. Moynihan and Mr. Ball, who called attention to painful truths, were silenced or denounced. Those who hounded these men obviously believed that they were serv-ing a larger purpose. The Kennedy administration did not want to appear divided to enemies. The Carter administration did not want to appear weak to the electorate. Every minority believes it important to maintain solidarity against criticism,

But an administracion with Mr. Bowles in a top position might have dealt differently with Vietnam. And America certainly would have been better off if it had listened to Mr. Moynihan's message years carlier.

Mark Twam once contended that America enjoyed "three unspeakably precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience and the prodence hever to diactice either Twain was trying to make people laugh. The career of Chester Bowles makes one wonder if we can still joke about the serious failing of ignoring prophets, even when we know their prophecies are likely to be right.

Abrams: Slogans Don't Make Good Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON - Most neoconservatives are former Democrats who began to move rightward in protest against what they saw as the Democrats' Vietnam-induced lurch to the left. They are living reminders of old ideological fends at the base of much of today's foreign and domestic agenda.

Left-wingers denounce neoconservatives as traitors to progressive Democratic values, while conserva-tives prize them as heralds of liberalism's demise. This explains Washing-ton's current fascination with the phenomenon of Elliott Abrams. The 38-year-old assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs now plays a starring role in the battle over aid to the Nicaragnan "contras." During President Reagan's first term, he helped on a rescue mission for the president's human rights policies; he was involved in engineering a shift away from Jeane Kirkpanick's admonition to, in effect, excuse repression by right-wing dictators, and to-ward a stance that claimed to admit the need for evenhandedness.

A Victnam War protester as a Har-vard undergraduate in the lare 1960s, Mr. Abrams served as director of the campus arm of Americans for Democratic Action. Yet even then he castigated "the lack of political realism among American intellectuals." He was dumped as the ADA's national chairman because he backed Hubert Humphrey rather than Engene Mc-Carthy for president.

He came to the attention of the Coalition for a Democratic Majority, which opposed George McGovern's 1972 nomination drive as well as new party rules that gave more power to women and minorities. He gained Washington experience on the Senare staffs of Henry Jackson and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, an early guiding spirit of neoconservatism.

By Alan Tonelson According to Mr. Abrams, his final break with the Democrats came soon after the 1979 Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, when he and a group of conservative Democrats met Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale to learn whether the administration had finally recognized the Soviet Union as an ideologically driven menace with which no cooperation was possible. They flunked the Abrams test, and by the summer of 1980 Mr. Abrams joined Democrats for Reagan. He switched parties after the election.

After January 1981 he headed the State Department's international organization and human rights bueaus. In July 1985 he took over the mter-American affairs bureau. Mr. Abrams has carried out his duties with pugnacity, plunging into name-calling bouts. Like other neo-conservatives, he understands that Reagan foreign policy is based on showing the world that the Vietnam syndrome no longer inhibits the United States from forcibly resisting As he argued in 1984, many current opponents of U.S. policy in Cen-tral America are "yesterday's peace activists in a more decorous garb." Their views are "distorted by a seemingly invincible anti-Americanism" and by a "profound reluctance to criticize America's adversaries." He berates disarmament advocates for choosing "moral posturing" over serious policy and for forgetting that "being good is not simple." His detractors denounce him as a

"hit man" and even a liar. Particularly unforgivable is his appropriation of such concepts as human rights and wars of national liberation to press for aid to anti-Communist rebels. Both sides in this battle protest too much. They have emphasized differences so loudly that shared assumptions have been drowned out. As the sterile debate over Central America makes clear, they remain dichard internationalists. Both see a compelling need for high-profile U.S. engagement in foreign controversies of even marginal strategic value. Both link U.S. security to lostering Third World respect for human rights and economic and social justice - often meaningless words in those lands. Both sides are still living in the 1960s, when America's ability to transform the rest of the world into peaceful, prosperous, Western-style societies seemed limitless.

Indeed many liberal Democrats

al argument for opposing direct mili-tary involvement in Central America that nothing in Central America is important enough to justify U.S. involvement of any kind. They forget that it was a combination of do-gooder impulses, single-minded anti-communism and a failure to examine concrete U.S. interests that drove America into a disaster in Vietnam.

Many liberal Democrats are more interested in posturing than in policymaking. But what of the onetime student pragmatist? The Reagan doctrine has crushed the commendable moderation that Mr. Abrams stood for when he refused to "Dump the Hump" in 1968 or jump on the radical students' bandwagon.

Like others who have been politically ostracized for failing to follow the party line, or for trying to weigh and to differentiate, Mr. Abrams and his fellow neoconservatives have de-cided to fight fire with fire, posturing with sloganeering. The result is a for-eign policy that is unable to distin-guish a freedom fighter from a storm trooper, and that could once again lead America on a debilitating divisive, unnecessary crusade. It is a pol-icy as deluded, impractical and dan-gerous as the trendy utopianism that gerous as the trendy thopanism of Mr. Abrams fought 20 years ago.

INSIGHTS

Amid Anguish on U.S. Farms, a Conviction That Good Must Triumph

By Ward Sinclair

ASHINGTON — The miles traveled now reach ioto the tens of thousands. Untold nights in austere country motels stretch into a long numbing blur, and the greasy food of the crossroads cafes is devoid of taste. But that has been the price of an extraor-

The discovery really is just an asterisk to a reporter's assignment since 1981 covering American agriculture while the industry has heen shaken to its roots by economic uncer-

There is great pain in the countryside, a pain that comes as much from the erosion of traditional optimism as from the wrenching loss of farms passed from generation to generation with love. Asking the questions that release a farmer's tears of grief over the kitchen table often is more than an outsider can bear.

Wherever the reporter goes in farm country, doors swing open. There is unabashed eagerness to tell the story of an eroding rural struc-ture, and a huge wish that the nation as a whole, Washington in particular, would listen, learn and act to encourage stability in agriculture.

Yet for all that pain, a certain reassurance emerges. One returns from each of these journeys moved by a sense of country and of people that speaks of strength, indomitable spirit and adaptability, a special side of the American character. It speaks of a continuing belief that right must always triumph.

Beyond that spirit is an army of unforgetta-hle human beings, some of them farmers, many of them not. All are related to the business of growing food and caring for the land; many are people who are the power of the country, fighting unsung battles and winning unsung vic-tories. From the memories and old notebooks, these are a few of those people.

THE FARMING GURU

As the car carrying a black man, Thomas Vaughus, turned up the bumpy lane, the white farmer and his wife hurried out of the house and waved a greeting. When the car stopped, the couple gathered around Mr. Vaughns's window and chattered like magpies. An old friend had come back, and the excitement was palpa-

Inside, around the kitchen table, there was coffee and small talk and a lot of laughter. Thomas Vaughns, it became clear, had made a Norma and Jack Strait keep a family farming tradition alive in farm family. There seemed to be no limit to the appreciation and respect that he had won with

This family had been going deeper and deeper in debt, growing cotton and soybeans that brought no price, when they crossed paths with Mr. Vaughns. He showed them, step by step, how to turn a truck garden into a lucrative alternative that would be their salvation. The debts were paid off; solvency became the norm.

At another farm, run by a large black family, Mr. Vaughns got a similar greeting. He was there on this warm winter morning to show them how to prune the blackberries that he had advised them to grow to augment their income. Father, mother, sons and daughters crowded around as Mr. Vaughns carefully snipped one cane after another.

A day spent with Mr. Vaughns in the country south of Pine Bluff turned out to be a moving experience. Wherever one went with this modest man, it was to be drawn into an aura of love and understanding. Black or white, the farm families be visited saw him as a special person. His stock in trade was knowledge, and he handed it out unstintingly.

For years, Mr. Vangins was a county extension agent in the Delta country between Memdifference in the life of this struggling Arkansas phis and Little Rock. He showed poor farmers posters depicting Campbell's "Cream of Ex-how to produce cash crops, helped them set up cooperatives and farmers' markets. He worked to help his clients find ont about state markets.

He showed them how to survive. Then he was promoted to the University of Arkansas at Pine Binff and assigned as the extension horiculturist for a 14-county area surrounding Pine Bluff. There, he has done on a wider basis what he began in one small Delta

Mr. Vaughus would never say so, for that is not his way, but his quiet work has changed peoples' lives in inspiring ways. There have been un headlines and no testimonial dinners. Just an aura of love and appreciation on conntry lanes in Arkansas.

There was something in the air at the top of the stairs in a nickety low-rent huilding in a barrio in Toledo, Ohio, that said Baldemar Velasquez eventually would succeed. No matter how the deck seemed stacked against him, his intensity and conviction were almost palpable, his devotion unquestionable.

There were exhortative banners on the walls, stacks of leaflets strewn about, earnest young people working on mailing lists, and inscuciant ploitation" soup. From this unlikely venue, Mr. Velasquez and his Farm Labor Organizing Committee were trying to energize a nationwide boycott of the soup company's products.

The boycott began in 1979, had a scant impact. Now it was 1982, and Mr. Velasquez still had no intention of giving up. The commit-tee had little money, few members, no influence with the media, no champions in Congress or the state capitals. But it was going ahead with the campaign because Mr. Velasquez was determined that it had to be done.

The committee chose Campbell Soup Co. as its target because of its national identity, but the campaign also involved other big names in food processing. At issue was Campbell's resistance to the committee's demands that migrant workers who pick tomatoes and cucumbers be paid better wages and benefits.

There is no harder, nn more exploitative, no more impoverishing work than that of the migrant farm laborer. There have been reforms here and there, but the poor living conditions and lack of health care and sanitation remain essentially unchanged for the toilers who make Americans the most amply fed people to histo-

Mr. Velasquez, then about 20, and his father founded the Farm Labor Organizing Committee to 1967. "We were really naive when we began," be said. "We had problems with minimum wages and with living conditions in the migrant camps. I thought we only had to point out the problems and they would be solved."

Yet the committee's campaign endured. "Progress takes time," Mr. Velasquez said in 1982, "but we totend to stick with it. My satisfaction is to prove these farm workers can

The epilogue is appropriate. In March, 1986, the Campbell Soup Co., Ohio and Michigan growers and the Farm Labor Organizing Com-mittee signed an agreement that achieved what Baldemar Velasquez began fighting for two decades earlier. It was an agreement that met the needs of all three sides. Progress takes time, as the man said.

THE FAMILY FARMER

Not even Disney could have drawn this pic-

for the second of their daily milkings.
This is the Pennsylvania dumain of Jack Strait, his wife, Norma, their three sons and the grandchildren. Two of the sons work with their father, tending the fields and the animals. A third son operates a sawmill on the farm. The Straits are idealized far and wide as solid farmers who keep a family farming tradition alive while living within easy reach of the big Eastern

These are people who give far more than they take, subsidizing society to a large degree with their mending labor. The farm supports three families, produces grain and commercial dairy milk, vegetables and fresh milk that help feed neighboring families, and Christmas trees that

Jack Strait is close to the cows. He knows the personality of each of the animals and he has given most of them names. He forgives their esses. When a new cow kicked him vigorous-home in Texas to the vegetable and fruit fields When he must go out in the cold at 2 A.M. to round up a stray, he laughs.

Mr. Strait even can laugh at himself. The higgest laugh is about the table he built for Norma some winters ago. He built it long and wide, just as Norma wanted for boliday eatherings. But he neglected one thing. He made it so long that there was no space for walking around the ends, so be simply cut the table.

The family's day begins long before dawn and usually does not end until dusk. They are up at all hours, chasing the cows that have broken loose or minding cows that are giving birth. At planting and harvest time, they work deep into the night, lights blazing on the tractors and combines, when other farmers are fast

This may partly explain Jack Strait's dilemma last year: whether he should take a few days off and go with other family members to a beach to North Carolina. He pondered and pondered, worried out loud, and then finally decided to go on vacatinn. The family was

The hangup was the cows. Leaving the farm was a decision not to be made lightly. It meant he would voluntarily miss a day of milking for the first time in 40 years. Mr. Strait mulled and mulled. He reluctantly turned over the milking to his grown sons and went off to the ocean, where he walked barefont in the sand for the first time in his life. He talked about it for

It is not that Mr. Strait could not afford to leave the farm. It is that he has no need for the amenities and leisure that other Americans take for granted. His land and his cows are such a part of him that he needs no more, and cannut fact bear to be away for too long.

This farmer has good times and bad times, but he does not march in protests, does not attempt to influence politicians, never voices the farmer's common complaint about being unappreciated. Jack Strait needs no sympathy he chose this lifestyle, after all - but watching him occasionally at close quarters, one senses that it is he and farmers like him that Americans ought to be worried about losing.

In dollar terms, one supposes, Mr. Strait may make less than a minimum wage but it is enough. The tradeoff is that he and Norma have a freedom that most people can only dream about. All they ask is that they be left relatively alone and allowed to dn the work they are best at.

That is a deal that society really cannot

Another view among high UN fficials is that Mr. Bota was recalled because he was preparing to defect. The officials said, "They felt he had to be prevented from defect-ing and therefore they laid a trap to get him to Bucharest."

The Romanian mission in Geneva declined comment on the case. One Western official said that the United Nations had not arted forcefully enough to obtain Mr. Bota's return.

The state of emergency, the third 1960, was imposed after legislators

The laws would have empowered Louis Le Grange, the minister of law and order, to detain people for six months without charge or trial and to declare "unrest areas," or local states of emergency, in areas deemed to be trouble spots.

According to lawyers and relatives, those arrested early Thursday were Saths Cooper, president of the anti-government Azanian People's Organization, and Piroshaw may, secretary-general of the Council of Unions of South Africa.

Others detained included Aubrey Mokoena, who is leading a campaign for the release of Nelsoo Mandela, the jailed black nationalist; and prominent clerics, including the Reverend Smaogaliso Mkatshwa, general secretary of the South African Catholic Bishops [On the highway to Johannesburg's Jan Smuts Airport, police erected o roadblock and stopped and searched cars. TRAVELER'S CHOICE

Highland fling

Some people will go even to knee-length to attract ourists. The Scottish Tourism chief, Alan Devereux, has seen urging his fellow Scots to wear the kilt more often, and to brandish their bagpipes wherever possible. "Can you imagine the Italians being shy about spaghetti, or he French reticent about their wines?" he asked, obviously morepared to be indulgent to any wimpish latterday soyness about the call. "Why is it," he stormed, "that so ofen visitors have to search for the Scottishness in Scotand, and too often end up with tartan tat from Taiwan?" scotland should not let itself be thought of as some quasinid-Atlantic nation, he added. Which might have been tenhemistic way of telling his countrymen to stop looking euphemistic way of telling his countrymen to stop looking english. Or, put another way, if you've got it, flaunt it.

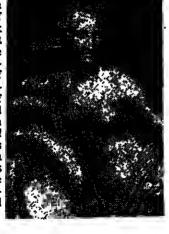

Black days

I Surprise story of the season. Not only the European ourism industry has been suffering from lack of clientele; he South Africans have found that the current violence here has been having a disastrous effect on their trade, which was their biggest source of foreign exchange after nineral and agricultural exports. (South Africa earned bout $450 million from tourism last year.) Now group ours are down by as much as 80 percent, and many botels save been forced to close. The dropoff in visitors from he United States was 17 percent, the sharpest of any major lountry. In a bold and ingenious move to counter this lecline, travel officials have devised new tactics, including the release of more than one million videocassettes potthe release of more than one million videocassettes poting forth the view that South Africa is cheaper and safer han countries hit by international terrorism, and that it s moving away from racialist practices. Even bolder was he suggestion of travel consultant Paul Browning voring a "come and see for yourself" policy, which would, ne believed, attract visitors with an unfavorable view of South Africa, and give South Africans a chance to begin

Borghese is back

■ The voluptuous white nurble statue of Paulina Borghese, the sister of Vapoleon I, will be back m view in Rome next nonth when part of the Borghese Museum repens after 18 months of enovation and restructuring. Only groups of 25 people accompanied by a museum custodian will be admitted, and only to the museum's main floor. In addition to Antooio Canova's statue of Paulina, some of Gian Lorenzo Bernini's sculptures will again be accessible.

Handling hand-luggage

The longueurs of waiting for baggage to appear on the empty carousel after a long flight have led more and more passengers to carry all kinds of bulky and unsuitable luggage directly onto planes. So bad, and even danger ous, has this practice become that the U.S. airlines may soon have uniform restrictions on the oumber and size of carry-on items permitted. The limitation has been pro-posed by Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Hanford Dole, who is especially concerned with the security aspects. "Improperly stowed bags can be dislodged during turbulence, and injure passengers or crew members," she said, adding that a surfeit of cabin-baggage could impede evacuation in an emergency. There will be a public hearing on the proposal at the Federal Aviation Administration on Lab. 14

by Warren Getler

OA, India - This gentle, palmfringed coastal expanse has intoxicated Western travelers for centuries. The Portuguese left it only under threat of war, in 1961, after 451 years of rule.

These days, Goa's sultry heat, spicy cuisine and exotic blend of cultures can make even the most time-pressed modern vacationer long to stay on. Now is the monsoon season, but the ideal time to go is autumn and winter — September through March. Crescent-shaped Goa, a "union territo-ry" administered by New Delhi, lies on India's west coast, about 300 miles (485 kilometers) south of Bombay. Its 1,400 square miles (3,700 square kilometers) are among India's most verdant, with tropical vegetation and stretches of rice paddies, recalling those of Southeast Asia.

Little seems to have changed since Al-fonso de Albuquerque seized the territory in 1510, and established Goa as a spicetrade capital. For the most part, it has remained a petchwork of unassuming fishing and farming villages. The beaches, some more than 25 miles long, are virtually free of 20th-century encroachment. Pastel-colored Portuguese villas, many dating from the 16th century, dot the country-side. Along the coast roads, white-stacco churches appear frequently, again reflect-ing the Portuguese legacy.

About one-third of the region's one mil-lion inhabitants are Catholic. The balance of the population consists of a Hindu majority and a Moslem minority. This ethnic mix gives rise to religious festivities oearly every other week, culminating in the February-March Carnival season.

The pride of the Christian community is the 16th-century Basilica of Bom Jesus, housing the remains of St. Francis Xavier, the Jesuit missionary who sought to spread Christianity throughout Lisbon's eastern Christian Goans, many of whom speak Portuguese and have such Mediterraneansounding names as D'Souza and Cardozo, are proud of their Western beritage. Some take offense when referred to as Indians. rather than Goans. They believe they have always had it better than the rest of India, and while the people are by no means rich, you do not see the kind of horrific poverty

Also, unlike other parts of the country where Western tourists are often ignored Goans tend to seek out friendly contact and are known for their hospitality. Some families will accommodate vacationers in their homes for as little as $20 a month. (The rupee, at time of going to press, stands at 12.59 to the dollar.) Indeed Goa has a dual appeal: It provides a tropical beach vacation, and the chance to experience a taste of Indian village life.

omnipresent in places like Bombay and

One can live comfortably for $5 to $15 a day, in beach lodges nestled in coconut palm-groves along Goa's 62 miles (100 kilometers) of coast. The lodges tend to be just paces away from the surf. Or, if resort amenities are a must. Goa offers five huxury hotels that rank as a bargain by Western standards, with air-conditioned double rooms starting at $50.

The two most popular resorts, near the remains of a Portuguese fort, are the hill-top Fort Aguada Beach Resort and the Taj Group's Holiday Village. The former, which has a lovely view of the ocean, also offers cottages in the $150 range. The other resorts are Majorda Beach - also with a lovely stretch of surf — Oberoi Bogmalo Beach and Welcomgroup Cidade

Getting to Goz has never been easy. To many who have discovered it, that is a virtue, and it may explain the preservation of the territory's charm. The customary routes are a 24-hour steamer trip down the coast from Bombay, or local connecting flights from Bombay or Delhi (about $45). Lufthansa's Condor offers the only direct flight from abroad, weekly out of Frankfurt, but you have to book their whole 10-day package, which for $1,200 includes accommodation at a good hotel. Bus and train connections are available from the big cities, but expect a long, bumpy ride. If you feel like roughing it a bit for the sake of views of coastal villages in the dawn light, the Mogul Lines steamer from Bombay is a memorable alternative. Reserve a cabin for $30, or be prepared to sleep—for $6—on the hard wooden deck with scores of backpackers.

ROM the moment you arrive and negotiate the fare to your lodgings, you'll encounter a strong dose of Goan enthusiasm, if not bravado. As your taxi dodges stray cows, goats and three-wheel motor ricishaws, you'll appreciate the drivers' fine sense of swerve. Public transportation, as anywhere in India, can be harrowing.

Bicycling is perhaps the best way to enjoy Goa's serenity. Be wary of offers to rent motorcycles; you need an Indian mo-torcycle license to drive them, and this is one offense Goan police are prone to enforce, with a stiff fine.

Goa's best beaches are more than a halfhour's ride from the steamer dock or airport. Colva beach, at the soothern end of the region is where local fisherman rendezvous at dawn. By noon, bucket loads of shrimp, crabs, langoustines and small fish are being brought to shore in outrigger canoes, and sold on the spot. A lobster is about $3, a plate of shrimp about $2. To wash down fresh seafood or piquant vege-tarian curry dishes, thatched-roofed beachside restaurants offer an assortment of local beer, a cashew-nut liqueur called "feui," and yoghurt fruit shakes, known as

But for an occasional fruit peddler and scores of clever ravens that advoitly snatch away whatever leftovers remain, the beaches are hassle-free, the Indian Ocean say, even for sharks. Sunshine and cloudless sky are all but guaranteed, except for the monsoon season that runs from late May through July. The Indian sun is deceptively powerful, becoming hottest in April and May when temperatures reach 95 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit (35 to 38 degrees Celsius).

There are three main beach areas from which to choose, each with their different clientele. Colva's 45-kilometer (28-mile) stretch of coast attracts budget travelers and overworked professionals seeking to get away from it all. Further oorth, beyond the capital Panaji, is Aguada and the clus-ter of resort hotels.

At the cliffy oorthernmost beaches, Anjuna and Chapora, the latter-day flower children, known as "trippies," congregate. groups of them take up a Robinson Crusoe existence among thatch-roof shelters built along Anjuna beach's wonderful terraced cliffs. And it is here that the sand shakes after sundown to the boisterous beat of all-night beach extravaganzas.

Depending on how far you may wish to stray, there are a host of side trips from Goa proper. More than a day's train journey away, at Hampi, are the architectural remains of India's mightiest Hindu city, dating from the early 16th century, spread over a majestic setting of boulders and colorful cliff formations. If thirst for tropical beach is not fully sated, you can carry on by train from Hampi south to the lush Kerala coast. A magnificent clifftop resort, Ashoka, at Kovalam Beach, is one of India's finest vacation spots.

Bartering With the Beach Yuppies

Beach. Thousands of young Western tourists, flocking in from all parts of India, join with equal numbers of Indians in a dawn-to-dusk round of hard and fast bargaining.

The Anjuna market dates back to the psychedelic '60s, when American draft-dodgers and European peaceniks first claimed Goa's northern beaches. One veteran of those days, affectionately called Jungley Barry, lamented over a glass of rak, the local brew: "Where have all the hippies gone, they're just too many of these bloody beautiful people nowadays." Polished-looking "yuppies" from Italy, Britain and West Germany sell silky bikinis, batik shirts and Levi-style jeans, while Rajasthani women peddile cloth saris a few feet away. Waves of motorcycles, maneuvering along dirt paths that lead to Aujuna, transport entire families to market. Confused-looking cows add to the chaos in the aisles. stalls. You can haggle over prices with the Indian merchants, but forget er when things get out of hand.

Health Book May Save You From Doctors' Ignorance

by Roger Collis

PUBLISHING executive in New York was off to a sales conference in India. Before leaving she called ber doctor for advice on health precautions. The receptionist told her the doctor was far too busy to get involved; she should first find out what vaccinations she needed, collect a prescription, get the vaccines and then the doctor would give her the

"A doctor friend of mine on her way back from Borneo stopped over in Moscow. On the Aeroflot flight to London she sat next to a girl returning from holiday in Tanzania. They talked about the hazards of malaria, for which the girl had taken no precautions, so the doctor advised her to get a posttropical checkup. Three weeks later, the doctor tried to get in touch with the girl, spoke to her mother, and was told she was dead.

"I saw a girl die who came along to the casualty department with bloodstained diar-rhoea. If I had been working there that afternoon, I would have said this girl has got amoebic dystentry. They assumed she had ulcerative colitis. She died because the treat-ment they gave her allowed the amoebae to

These cautionary tales are told by Richard Dawood, a 31-year-old physician at London's University College Hospital, to illustrate the ignorance of travelers - and doctors - about the teeming health hazards lying in wait for the unwary, especially in countries outside North America, Northern Europe, Australia and New Zealand. According to Dawood, the hazards are many, but most are easily avoidable provided you take a few simple precautions.

Technology Provokes False Security

This is the message of a remarkable book,
"Travellers' Health," published in England
last month, in which Dawood has brought together 42 specialists, all top in their fields, from several countries, to provide practical advice on the prevention and treatment of travel health problems, both exotic and mundane. They range from diarrhea, hepatitis and the resurgent scourge of malaria, to dental emergencies and gynecological problems. Not to mention a host of minor things that can make trips a misery, such as trouble with contact lenses, insect bites, and sun-

Contributors include such luminaries as Dr. David Warrell, editor of "The Oxford Textbook of Medicine," who wrote the chapter on animal bites, and Dr. Arie Zuckeror of microbiok versity of London, on viral hepatitis. The book is both erudite and lucid, compellingly readable on how diseases are spread, precautions to take, self-diagnosis, how to check that you're getting the right treatment and, in an emergency, how to treat yourself. A measure of its scope is that many doctors will discover how to treat diseases they've ocver even heard of.

Says Dawood, "The kind of medical technology that surrounds the affluent business traveler at home creates a false sense of security. People tend to delegate precautions, tell their secretary to find out what they need and then go and get immunized. In fact, you're only protecting yourself against half a dozen diseases: hepatitis, polio, typhoid, tetanus, rabies and cholera. Most advice is restricted to, These are the immunizations you oced (sometimes vaccinations are not mandatory but that doesn't mean they're not important for your personal protection), here are your malaria tablets, be careful with food and water.' People then think they've done everything they can. After all, they say, we're going to the good hotels, we're not going to mix with the local people, we don't need to worry any more. That could not be further from the truth. "When it comes to being careful with food and drink, most people haven's got the remotest idea what that means. You may have heard about the group of 100 doctors and their wives who wound up a British Medical Association conference in Egypt last No-vember with a cruise down the Nile. Much to their surprise and horror, they all got riproaring diarrhea. But oo fewer than twofifths of all international travelers suffer from diarrhea abroad. About 30 percent of sufferers are confined to bed and another 40 percent are forced to change their sched-

The idea for the book grew from Dawood's experiences as a student and doctor traveling in more than 60 countries. "The problem is that most Western doctors aren't trained in any of the tropical diseases. When I was in West Africa, I saw cases of filariasis, a worm infestation in the lymphatics, and kept waiting for someone to tell me about this as a student. We got one afternoon on malaria in my entire medical training"

A major hazard resulting from such ignorance is that serious diseases can be missed or mis-diagnosed when travelers get back home. Malaria, for example, can mimic the symptoms of other diseases: high fever, ache; pains in the joints. There are 2,000 reported cases a year in Britain, and a similar number in France. Resistant strains of falciparum malaria can be fatal. Amoebic dysentery can lie dormant and undetected for months. Says Dawood, "A small number of people coming back from East Africa will have sleeping sickness; you have to make the right tests and treatment is difficult. Tropical diseases are unlikely to be detected by someone who isn't a specialist."

Similarly, travelers need specific advice before setting off on a trip. For example, "women taking the pill should know that a bad dose of diarrhea could mean they lose protection, so they'll have to use another method for the rest of their cycle. The chapter on this has been written by Dr. Elphis Christopher, one of the leading lights of contraceptive medicine."

"Many intelligent travelers spurn advice, because it often goes no further than a list of do's and doot's, and consult a doctor if you get sick. That's ridiculous. Even if you can find a doctor doesn't guarantee that you'll get appropriate treatment." Dawood says.

The book is "prevention based," being divided up according to how diseases are spread. The first group of chapters deals with diseases caused by food, drink and poor hygiene; diarrhea and intestinal infections, intestinal parasites, polio, viral hepatitis and a nasty infection called Guinea worm, transmitted by polluted water. Seven pages are devoted to "safe water." Says Dawood, With food and water hygiene, you have to relearn what to look for, accept that a fly in the Hilton hotel hasn't suddenly become clean. In Africa, flies carry things like amoebic dysentry and 80 or so other diseases. It takes one fly to land on your food once."

What this means is choosing food that has been freshly and thoroughly cooked and been washed in polluted water, and prepared buffets. What looks appetizing can be a poor guide to food safety. Dawood recommends local dishes like curry in preference to Western food. Above all, never drink unbottled water and avoid ice in drinks.

The second part of the book deals with diseases spread by contact with humans, fresh water, sand and soil. These include tuberculosis, tetanus and diptheria. Dawood says he picked up "creeping cruption," a type of hookworm that burrows under the skin, from a beach in Florida. (It is normally found in Asia and the Caribbean.) The advice is to walk barefoot on sand only below the high water mark and to avoid swimming in lakes and rivers.

Eleven ehapters are devoted to diseases spread by insects, mostly mosquitos, such major hazards as malaria, yellow fever, dengue fever, sleeping sickness and a group of exotie nasties called arboviruses.

The rest of the book covers everything from snake bites and altitude sickness to eye troubles and AIDS, as well as the dangers of unsupervised snorkeling. There's a chapter ou what drugs and remedies to take on a trip. "Travellers' Health," by Richard Dawood, is published by Oxford University Press, 498 pages Price £6.95.

Folk-Epic Spectacle

by Erik de Mauny

UY DU FOU, France - The Vendée is a region that fills a somber chapter in the history books. In the conflict between Republicans and Vendean Royalists following the French Revolution of 1789, it was laid waste in the most murderous civil war France has ever known. But apart from the broad beaches of its Atlantic Coast, it was not, until recently, a region widely known to most travelers.

If that is beginning to change, it must be due in large part to the magnetic attraction of the great re-enactment of Vendean history that takes place each year at the Puy de Fou, in the heart of the Vendean bocage. With 10,000 people attending each performance, it now draws about 230,000 spectators in the course of the season, which runs from mid-June to late August. It is a superb show, and watching it, as I did at a final rehearsal a few nights ago, it is difficult to realize that it all began less than 10 years ago.

It was the brainchild of a young sousprefet, Philippe de Villiers, who, in September 1977, put forward the idea of creating a great open-air spectacle, a kind of folk epic based on the oral traditions of the Vendean entry, with the ruined château of the Puy du Fou as its setting, and involving the active participation of the people from the 13 surrounding communes. It was also Philippe de Villiers who wrote the script and ected the actual staging of the spectacle. But from the start, it was conceived as a communal enterprise. In November 1977, the Puy du Fou Association was founded, and in June 1978 came the first performance, with a cast of 300 local actors.

The original idea for the scenario was one of elegant simplicity. It was to portray the major convulsions of history, from the Middle Ages to the present day, through the eyes of a Vendean peasant family, the Maupillier family, and of their eldest son, who in each generation was always given the name Jacques. One of the earliest scenes shows the arrival at the Puy du Fou of François I and his retinue, and one of the last, the wretched stream of refugees from the Ardennes fleeing before the invading German armies in June

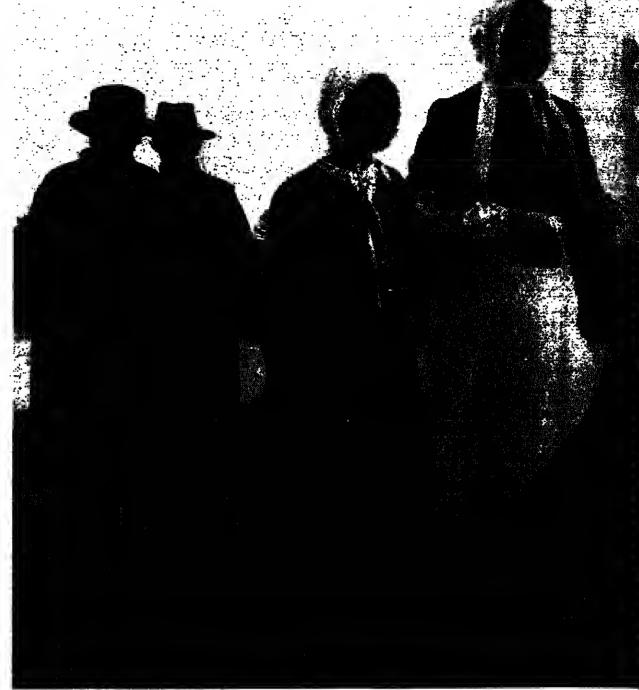

If the original concept was a simple ooe, the production itself, since the first performance in 1978, has become steadily wider in scope and richer in detail. This year 650 actors are taking part, including a calvary contingent of 50 riders, with 200 others helping behind the scenes, and there has been an increasingly elaborate panoply of special effects, achieved by the use of lasers, quadraphonie sound systems, pyrotechnics, back projection, and a computerized bank of spotlights to create 250 complex lighting

Oral tradition plus the computer might seem an unlikely marriage, but it works. Indeed, this is a spectacle of such startling originality that a new word, cinescente or "cinestage," has been coined to describe it. It can be traced back, no doubt, to the original concept of son-et-hamière. But to compare what happens at the Puy du Fou to its predecessors is rather like comparing a Bach toccata and fugue to a fife-and-drum band.

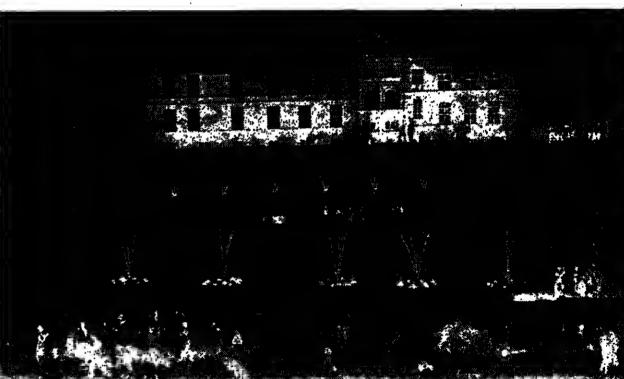

It is difficult to decide which are the most memorable out of so many scenes and tabare those evoking the Royalist uprising in the Vendée. It started when the revolutionary Constituent Assembly in Paris imposed a new civil constitution on the elergy, an action which provoked fierce opposition in this traditionally Catholie region. The government answered by dispatching Republican troops with orders to devastate the countryside and exterminate the population, and it was Turreau, one of the bloodthirstiest of its emissaries, with his so-called "infernal columns," who set fire to the Château of the Puy du Fou in January 1794.

The present spectacle unfolds against the stark outlines of the ravaged château and the lake in front of it, alternating episodes of wartime horrors with more peaceful scenes of labor in the fields and peasant festivities. The narration, with monologues and dialogues, has been entrusted to members of the Comédie Française, and there is a strikingly effective musical score by Georges Delerne.

But if the spectacle itself is remarkable, no less remarkable has been its spin-off effect, the many other social and cultural activities to which it has given rise. These include the creation of a local radio station, Radio Alouette, and of a mobile cinema, the development of an ecological museum housed in a restored wing of the château, the restoration

Of his many castles, the what the gourmet duke and his duke's favorite was the magnificent guests ate with knife, spoon and Chillon; rediscovered and romantifingers, was a refined, sophisticated cized four centuries later by Lord and even precious cuisine. "Le Fait de Cuisine," set down by Chiquart in 1420, reveals 61 inventive recipes that like nouvelle cuisine, respond-

The 118-page manuscript was recently deciphered by a Canadian medievalist, Terence Scully, and edited by the cantonal archives of Vallais. Scully, a professor of Ronance languages at Wilfred Laurier University in Waterloo, Ontario. has just corrected the proofs of his English translation from the medi-eval French; it will be published in the fall by Peter Lang Publishing of New York and Bern.

Next year, be hopes to bring out modern version with the help of his wife. "It's a long job of adapting and testing, but the recipes are really tasty," says Scully, who stages a medieval banquet at his university very year.

Duke Amédée VIII of Savoie became pope under the name of Felix and wrapped in the lightest pastry V, and for 10 years the region around Lansanne became a Cathohe capital, rivaling Rome or Avignon. At the papal court, to respect fast days, Maistre Chiquart's banquets included both lake and sea-fish: dolphin — "that prince of fishes" - lobster, eel, trout and and fish, soups and sauces by their tuna. The Law of Jungle-Bashing are only of dubious value amid the unbridled fury of a tropical storm. Most are too claustrophobic for the bot, clammy conditions of the jungle. As far off the ground as possible is the best place to sleep, out of the way of floods and nasties such as snakes, scorpions, centipedes and spiders. Lashed-pole platforms or hammocs, rough-roofed with a tarpaulin, do the trick. You can at least ward off damp and cold (yes, cold) with a thin foam insulation mat under your sleeping

What to wear? Certainly not that 100 percent jungle-green outfit. You could get more adventure than you bargained for, when you're shot at either by Malaysian army patrols looking for guerrillas, or by guerrillas looking for Malaysian soldiers. Loose cotton is best. Long tronsers are advisable, although jungle-wise hard cases do tough it out in shorts but think of thorns, makes hornests and leacher. snakes, hornets and leeches

Good shoes are vital; the best are canvas army-style jungle boots laced up to the calf (around $10 in Singapore), with the alterna-tive option of ankle-high sports boots. Try two pairs of long thick socks with your ers tucked in. It is more comfortable to sweat than to develop blisters.

Other useful items are a torch or headlamp, raincape, waterproof groundsheet (it can improvise a tent), a floppy hat and a Swiss Army-style penknife. Plastic bags, es-pecially heavy-duty kitchen garbage sacks are invaluable; line your rucksack with one. Opinions vary on food — dehydrated is certainly lighter to carry than tinned — but all agree that good hot tea will solve most problems. For real expeditions, you will need Orang Asli (aboriginal) guides, and porters. Unfortunately, but perhaps justifiably, they are now asking as much as 40 Malaysian dollars a day, (around $18) for

What could go wrong? Not much. There is little to fear in the jungle providing you are sensible. Most animals can either smell or hear you a mile off, or else, as snakes do, they feel the earth vibrating to your clodhopping footsteps, and will disappear long before you arrive. Not all snake bites are fatal, anyway. But panic often is.

Blood-sucking leeches are a fairly harmless fact of life in the rain forest. A touch of salt, soap, tobacco or a roll-up insect repellent stick will remove them quickly enough. The best protection against accidents is to move slowly and quietly through the forest, taking care not to idly kick or poke anonymous lumps of soil, leaves or twigs. These could turn out to be a homets' nest, probably more dangerous than any tiger.

Getting lost is very frightening, and obvi-ously a major problem. The inexperienced should never stray from the beaten trail. Map and compass-training are a distinct advantage. Yet the jungle is more hospitable than you may think. The Orang Asli will show you wild fruits, edible berries and roots. Water, more important than food, can game-plan on jungle expeditions, so pool equipment and plan meals communally.

The tents so dear to most Western hikers be found in certain vines. Even the murkiest stream-water can be filtered through a hand-kerchief or treated with a water purifying kerchief or treated with a water purifying tablet. One way to get the most out of your jungle trek is to lower your expectations from the beginning.

For instance, the forest is not ablaze with hot sun. It is dark and wet. You too will be wet, from rain-storms, from the high humidity, from fording many rivers, and from your own perspiration. Donning yesterday's soaking wet clothes, socks and boots each morning comes naturally after a while. There is no choice. But it is physically and psychologi-cally vital to keep one change of clothing dry for sleeping in.

Only modest daily walking targets are hievable. You can make 1,000 to 2,000 yards an hour in primary forest, a mere 100 yards in a swamp or struggling uphill. Most wildlife is in hiding behind dense foliage. You can stand only a few yards from an clephant — or a shy native — and never know it. It is all too easy to emerge from these marvelous jungles bored and complaining: "Didn't see a thing!" But with perseverance, a bit of learning, background reading and experience, or an expert guide, you come to appreciate what is easily seen and does not run away: plants and trees.

Lurid toadstools and fungi compensate for the monotonous greenness of it all, for the virtual absence of flowers. "Invisible" birds, you discover, can be identified by their song. You get excited by tiger tracks alone; conservationists say you would be "lucky" to see one in the flesh. You pause to wonder at the humble spider, ant or bug. A night walk unveils the magical luminescence of bacterial matter on the forest floor, for all the world as though the stars had been spread out at your feet, a carpet of sparkling white light. Your flashlight picks out tiny red pinpricks in the blackness: the eyes of a tree shrew, a delicate mouse-deer or a tree-frog. You are

by Philip Mansel

AIRO - Manyal Palace is probably the finest private house in the Middle East. Indeed, it is more than a house. It is a world of its m, a piece of history set in a garden on an and in the Nile. It consists of five buildgs: a reception building, a mosque, a prite residence, a museum and a throne-om, all built between 1901 and 1938 in a riety of neo-Islamic styles. The creator of this enchanting and original

I world was Prince Mohammed Ali of typt, a cousin of King Farouk, Born in 75, the younger son of Khedive Tewfik, ler of Egypt from 1879 to 1892, Prince ohammed Ali was educated in Cairo, Vima, Geneva and Paris, and like many embers of his dynasty, grew up to be equal-at home in Europe and in the Middle East. The originality of Manyal comes from the ct that, unlike so many other cases of a fiddle Eastern fortune being used to create s possessor's dream house, Manyal is a neolamic house, designed in a neo-Islamic

The entrance-lodge to Manyal is also the ception building, and contains two mag-ificent rooms, one in Moorish, the other in amascus style. Both are lined with divans nd covered with sumptuous carpets. Beside rem is the mosque, which has a door openig directly on the street and overflows with elievers on Fridays.

It is unwise to enter the hunting museum ext door, which contains King Farouk's salling collection of stuffed animals. The sitor should turn to the house where Prince lohammed Ali lived, built in neo-Mameike style, with rooms covered in superb moman tiles. It contains the prince's hrary and innumerable portraits of his anestors, including a splendid portrait of Mo-ammed Ali, painted against a background f ships and palm trees, and framed in a urst of sun rays. Since Prince Mohammed di was clearly a rather vain man, there are lso photographs of himself all over the ouse: his tarboosh, which he insisted on caring in Europe as well as the Middle ast, as a sign of pride in his background, is lways set at an elegantly distinctive angle.

His reverence for his religion and his love I the history and culture of the Middle East re shown in the museum. of the Ottoman sultan. There are some extraordinary portraits of the prince's ancestors, including one of his grandfather, Il-hamy Pasha, the husband of an Ottoman princess, which has what must be the most elaborate frame in the world, on which every possible fruit and animal appear to have been carved. Ilhamy Pasha's uniform is hardly less elaborate than the frame.

Some of the most extraordinary objects in the museum are the cloths which used to hang from the left arms and shoulders of the servants in traditional Turkish households as they poured the coffee. These cloths are heavily embroidered in gold thread and studded with pearls, diamonds and other jewels. They set off perfectly the plainer gold surface of the trays on which coffee was served, in small porcelain cups set in gold cup-holders, lavishly adorned with pearls

HE last and most extraordinary building in Manyal is the throneroom: Prince Mohammed Ali is probably the only person in the world who has an able to say that be had a throne-room in his garden. On the first floor are salons filled with his grandfather's elaborate Louis XV furniture. In the throne-room below, portraits of the prince's ancestors of the House of Mohammed Ali, impressive bearded figures in rigid regal poses, line the walls.

At the end there is an explosion of cande labra and gilding and, below yet another portrait of Mohammed Ali, the throne—a tribute to Prince Mohammed Ali's particular position and ambitions. As a son of the Kedive Tewfik, and younger brother of the Khedive Abbas Hilmi (deposed by the Brit-ish in 1914), Prince Mohammed Ali may have felt that he had a better claim to the throne of Egypt than Tewfik's younger brother Fouad, who reigned from 1917 to 1936, and Fouad's son Farouk (1936-1952).

These were mere dreams, however. Until 1953, Prince Mohammed Ali continued his charmed life, adding to his collections, publishing his memoirs, and criticizing his consin Faronk — "vindictive and cracked" whose behavior was destroying respect for the monarchy and the dynasty in Egypt. When the blow came in 1952, and Farouk was forced to abdicate, Prince Mohammed Ali at first welcomed the change. However, in 1953 a Republic was established, and all possessions of members of the House of Mohammed Ali were confiscated Henceforth Manyal belonged to the Republic of Egypt. Prince Mohammed Ali spent the last years of his life, "penniless" but uncomplaining, in France and Switzerland. He died in Lausanne in 1955.

In 1963 the Egyptian Government com-mitted the atrocity of allowing half the su-perb garden, planted with rare tropical trees and plants collected by the prince, to be taken over by the Club Mediterrance as a hotel. Therefore the effect of the buildings plunged in greenery is partly lost. Otherwise, however, Manyal has not suffered too badly. It is a symbol of Egypt's Islamic heritage, and a magnificent memorial to the dynasty that brought Egypt into the modern world.

Clemens Wins 11th Straight As Baylor Homers Against Jays

TORONTO - Even a rain delay that lasted almost three hours Wednesday night could not stop double, retired 16 straight batters. the hottest pitching act in the Alexander, the Blue Jays' 35the hottest pitching act in the American League, with Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox winning his 11th straight on a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

That tied the team record for a season's best start, set by Roger Moret in 1973, and put Clemens only four away from the American League record held by Johnny Allen of Cleveland (1937) and Dave McNally of Baltimore (1969). The major league record is 19-0, set by Rube Marquard of the New York Giants in 1912.

Clemens, after waiting 2 hours, '47 minutes for the game to start, looked mortal in the first inning when he walked Tony Fernandez and the next hatter, Rance Mulliniks, doubled to make it 1-1. But he held the Blue Jays to four hits for eight innings, teammate Don Bay-lor hit a two-run homer off Doyle Alexander in the fourth and relief pitcher Bob Stanley staved off the Blue Jays in the ninth.

"I got tired, it's I o'clock in the morning, that's all there is to it." Clemens said of failing to complete the game. "I didn't have my mind too right when I came out to start the game. I wasn't really concentrating a great deal when I came

Winds Major Factor In U.S. Golf Tourney

> By Dave Anderson New York Times Service

SOUTHAMPTON, New York - Wind was hlustering across the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club on Wednesday when a Japanese visi-tor to the United States Open fished into his pants pocket. Suddenly a half-dozen hills of U.S. currency fluttered across the lawn sloping down from the brown-shin-gled clubhouse designed in 1892 hy Stanford White.

"They're overseeding," said Dave Marr, the ABC-TV network's club pro, "with dead presidents." But, through the years Shinne-cock Hills has been perpetuated by the wind-hlown money of its millionaire members, often symbolized by a Rolls-Royce or three in the parking lot. And when the U.S. Open began Thursday, the world's best golfers were playing for windhlown prize money at what until then had been one of America's most private preserves of par.

With at least 75,000 spectators expected, Shinnecock Hills might be trod by as many people over these four days as by those who have been on it for nearly the cen-

At last, the world has been permitted to discover Shinnecock, as it is known, out in the fashionable Hamptons, far from interstate highways and high-rise coudos The small "members only" sign is not in force. And if the wind blows,

PGA to Ease 'Home' Rule

New York Times Service

SOUTHAMPTON, New York - All foreign players on the RGA Tour, such as Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Bernhard Langer of Germany, Greg Norman of Australia, Sandy Lyle of Scotland Isno Aoki of Japan, will be required next year to play an equal probe of U.S. tour events in order to retain their card and playing priviles The requirement probably will be 7 to 10 tournaments, a some close to the discussions said, instead of the 15 now required at European players but not of the Japanese.

The 10-man PGA Tour tournament policy board decided May 2 at a meeting in Washington to set one minimum number of events to foreign members and to eliminate the controversial home citons and "home country" requirements. The board will decide the ener number of tournaments at its regular September meeting.

The home-country rule allowed a foreigner to play the U.S. Rose when he wished and a tournament in his native country when he wished. The home-circuit rule, which applied mostly to those on the European tour, required that a foreigner who played in a low outli-his country play a minimum of 15 PGA events to keep his card. And the traditionalists will have triumphed.

Out here on the sandy South Fork of Long Island's East End, the terrain resembles the Scottish linksland where shepherds supposedly invented golf.

Bill Williams, the Wall Street lawyer who is president of the U.S. Golf Association, joked that this Open is the "first playing of the British Open in the United States."

Especially if the wind hlows. And out here the wind always seems to be hlowing. Usually off the nearby Atlantic Ocean to the south-southwest. Sometimes from the whitecaps of Peconic Bay to the oorth-northwest. Occasiooally from Montank Point to the eastsoutheast. Sometimes a nor easter slams down from Rhode Island,

"The northwest," said the 76-year-old caddy master, Alex White, is the toughest wind,"

If the sadists of Shinnecock are rewarded, the wind will blow from a different direction each day, creating a difference of six or seven clubs on a hole. At No. 12, a par-4 of 472 yards (413 meters), Nicklaus has used a driver and a nine-iroo downwind, a driver and a threewood into the wind.

White, with a proud smile, noted that "the other day the wind hlew down the scoreboard on the 10th tee." He was wearing a faded Panama straw hat that appeared to have been exposed to the Shinnecock wind as long as he has: since 1919. During the 1938 hurricane, a white clubhouse pillar was blown onto the nearby ninth green.

"But we played the next day," White said. "Nobody wants a hurricane wind for the Open, but the members want the wind to hlow. It's not unusual for it to hlow 35,

This New Red Sox Gunner Also Could Become the Latest of Boston's Duds

By Thomas Boswell New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - With Roger Clemens, you hold

Will he strike out 20 batters, as he did against Seattle in April to set a major-league record for a nineinning game? His lucky number, worn around his neck, is 21, so you figure he has something planned. Will he pitch a no-hitter, as he came within four outs of doing in his home state of Texas? Since the 23-yearold has allowed far fewer hits than innings he has pitched this year, far below the legal limit for a Boston

Red Sox pitcher, he sure has a chance. With an 11-0 start, and the hottest Red Sox team in generations behind him, when will he lose? Or will he? A man who is 6 feet 4 (1.93 meters), weighs 210 pounds (95.2 kilograms), throws a haseball 98 mph (157.7 koh), has a reflex-freezing curveball and superb control is the sort whose mystique precedes him, Gorman Thomas, a former home-run champion, calls him "overbearing." Which, if you are a hitter, is about right. Reggie Jackson says that as long as Clemens keeps his fastball above the belt, "I could stand up there until I collect my pension and I'd be just another notch oo his gun.

Clemens could be the American League's answer to Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets in the National League. He could be the Fenway Messiah - often sighted but never confirmed — who has been sent to finish the joh that Jim Lonborg began in 1967 hut never completed because of a ski injury.

The Red Sox have had only two trips to the World Series in 40 years. And not one world title since 1918. Clemens could be the man - the Tom Seaver, Sandy

Koufax, Boh Gibson, Jim Palmer, Catfish Hunter around whom a perennial contender and an occasional world champion can be huilt

Baseball's the first sport in this town, and people are starting to get excited," said Clemens, knowing that the Red Sox's 38-19 spring into first place means more to many a Bostonian than having the Patriots play in the Super Bowl or the Celtics add another National Basketball Association title banner.

But with Clemens, you still hold your hreath. He is, you see, the perfect Red Sox phenomenon, touched

As a rookie, Clemens struck out 15 in a game, tying the career best of Smokey Joe Wood, who was the Roger Clemens of 1911. At age 22, Wood was 34-5 and the equal of the legendary Walter Johnson. When Wood was 23 (Clemens's age), his arm was dead and with it the Red Sox's dreams of a dynasty.

Clemens broke the team's rookie strikeout record held by Ken Brett. The Brett who was thought to be a far better prospect than his brother, George, Ken Brett was a career 10-15 with the Red Sox, George Brett, of the Kansas City Royals, will go to the Hall of Fame.

Despite a wonderfully compact pitching motion that ought to be the perfect mitigation against glitches, the often-injured Clemens always seems a pitch away from losing a wheel at high speed.

now and perhaps forever with that hint of potential disappointment that clings to Fenway Park. Clemens has arm trouble.

A season-ending forearm injury in 1984, season-ending shoulder surgery in 1985 and, at at present, a recurrent cracked knuckle on the middle finger of his pitching hand. He has never pitched more than 180 innings in a season. Only once in his three previous pro years has he made it to 100. His gears and levers may compact pitching motion that ought to be the perfect mitigation against such glitches, Clemens always seems a pitch away from losing a wheel at high speed. "I hope all that's behind me now," he said recently. Others hope so, too.

And, Clemens has broken the team record for fastest start to a season by a full-time starting pitcher, set hy Boo Ferriss when he went 10-0 in 1946. The same Ferriss who began his Boston career 21-10, then went

25-6 and won only 19 more the rest of his life. Clemens could be the first 20-game winner for the Red Sox since Dennis Eckersley at age 23. Eckersley developed arm miseries and was mediocre at 25. Or. Clemens could be the Red Sox first Cy Young Award

Whatever Clemens does, be has the problem of pitching will persevere until our bats come alive." Clemens knows it. How can he miss it? Until recently, the Red Sox had their best pitching rotation since Carl Mays, Joe Bosh, the original Sad Sam Jones and a left-hander named Babe Ruth. The incarnation was Clemens, Bruce Hurst, Oil Can Boyd and Al Nipper. What happens? Nipper was spiked so badly that he was expected to be out two months. Hurst, who had discovered a split-finger strikeout pitch and almost could match Clemens statistic for statistic, pulled groin muscle and is out of the rotation. As a result, nine months after arthroscopic surger to remove cartilage from his shoulder. Clemens is trying to carry the Red Sox - and their modest defense and bullpen - to a pennant. Have the Red Sox, so often burned hy pushing prospects too hard, finally learned their lesson? Yes, But does it help them? No. "Oh, they're always tellin' me I work too hard, Fish and them," said Clemens of pitching coach Bill Fischer, "I go full speed ahead. They've been trying to slow me down, but that's how I get things done. So, despite that bad finger, Clemens is back to taking bis regular turn. Born and raised in Dayton, Ohio, and sent to high school in Houston. Clemens was an all-America twice at the University of Texas. He is a hard-working, broad-shouldered, already married and settled-down fellow who does little bragging or fast living.

When he sets a record, he "thanks the man in the fending off these ghosts, the long tradition of promising pitchers hlighted, and overcoming the city's longingrained habit of asking; "What will go wrong now?"

Roger Clemens just wants to be a great ballplayer, and help the Red Sox and their fans forget everything bad that has happened since World War L. But you hold your hreath.

Brazil will remain in Guadalajara to meet Poland on Monday. Spain will travel south to Queretaro to play the winners of Group E, either Denmark or West Germany.

Brazil, who could reach the final vithout having to leave their Guadalajara base - just as they did during their triumphant 1970 Mexican campaign — showed Thurs-day the first signs it may be devel-oping into a very good team.

The Brazilians' confidence reached such a level in the second half that they brought on Zico, who has been suffering for some months from a knee injury.

A delightful back-heel by Zico set up Careca to score Brazil's third goal shortly before the end. Brazil totally outclassed the Irish in the first half, going ahead in the 15th minute when Careca converted a Muller cross. Josimar, playing his first game in

The result was especially disap-pointing to Northern Ireland's goalkeeper, Pat Jennings. On his 41st birthday, Jennings had hoped to keep the Brazilian forwards at bay in the last of 119 international appearances for his country spanning 22 years.

In Monterrey, Algeria lost goal-keeper Naceredine Drid in the 19th minute. He was taken to hospital with head, neck and shoulder inju-ries after a mid-air collision with one of his defenders.

Drid's injury occurred in the llth minute when he was heavily challenged by Andoni Goicoech following a corner. The Spanish defender was not warned, though he was later cautioned in the final Drid continued until the 19th minute but by then Ramon Caldere had given Spain — which lost 1-0 to Brazil in its opening game — a 1-0 lead in a game marked by long spells of dreary, rugged and scrap py play.

Dow Off 7.94 on Profit-Taking

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange ended mixed Thursday, pressured by profit-taking and persistent questions about the U.S. economy's ability to produce stronger corporate earnings. Trading was light.

The Dow Jones industrial average spent the day in negative territory, finishing with a loss of 7.94 points at 1,838.13, but advancing issues edged out losers 803-735 among the 1,951 issues traded.

Broader market indicators rose slightly. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.23, to 138.81; Standard & Poor's 500stock index rose 0.36, to 241.49, and the price of an average share added 7 cents.

On the Big Board, volume fell to 109.1 million shares from 127.3 million Wednesday.

Analysts said the government's report Thursday that U.S. retail sales fell 0.1 percent in May disappointed the market. The data was significant cantly weaker than economists had anticipated. Hugh Johnson, head of the investment policy committee at First Albany, said the stock mar-ket is "begging for evidence" that the economy will respond to reduced interest rates and the lower dollar. "So far, the market isn't seeing that response and investors, be they large or small, are losing patience," Mr. Johnson said.

He said that equities are now "hostage" to' economic data. "Investors are saying that until they see evidence of a growing economy and a recovery in corporate earnings, they aren't going to buy stocks," he said.

Vartec Tackles Tricky Task: To Sell Helping Robots See Curves

By BARNABY J. FEDER

New York Times Service

EW YORK — If there was a surprise star at last week's machine-vision show in Detroit, technologically speaking, it was probably a small, privately held company that recently changed its name from Advanced Computer Concepts Inc. to Vartec Inc. The seven-year-old company, based in Costa Mesa, California, displayed a system that dealt with one of vision's trickiest problems: How to see at high speed small changes in surface textures of contoured objects, such as fruit or machined parts with curved surfaces.

"If they can really do it, it opens up new markets," said Stanley

Lapidus, chairman of Itran Corp., a growing company based in design advances that

Manchester, New Hampshire, that had one of the largest and best-attended booths at the

Indeed, a major advance in surface-flaw and texture-detection systems could vastly expand the quality-control applications of machine vision, particularly in such areas as food products, where appearance affects sales, and critical manufactured parts, where tiny flaws are hard for humans to detect but vital to performance.

The first major application of Vartec's system has been a project sponsored by Parker Hannefin to inspect molded rubber O rings, doughnut-shaped circular seals that are used in industrior ings, dougnmit-shaped circular seals that are used in industrial and medical products (the failure of a large Oring caused the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger). Vartec's system has also been applied to finding flaws on catheters and testing the dryness of fruit (by measuring how wrinkled it is).

Sales of vision systems, which automate inspection work and guide machines such as robots, are growing at an annual rate of 25 percent to 50 percent. But that rate is below projections and profits remain elusive in the crowded field, which includes a number of start-up companies that are in deep financial trouble. Worse still, General Motors Corp. and other major customers are paring capital spending plans.

T DID NOT ADD UP to a good climate for innovation, and the show reflected it. Few companies were advertising major technical advances. Instead, the consensus seemed to be that investors and customers wanted to see improvements on systems with a proven track record of success, and design advances that would lower the cost of installing vision.

Machine-vision systems work by capturing an image, usually with advanced video cameras, and electronically processing the image until it can be interpreted. Typically, vision processing highlights such variables as edges, holes and surface area to identify objects, key features and the direction they are facing. Such processing cuts down the amount of information the system must interpret to make sense of the scene.

Vision companies are trying to develop better ways of processing images, so that important features can be seen more quickly or accurately. They also are trying to improve the electronic interpretation of the processed images. They rely on mathematical descriptions of the vision task and the path to be taken in solving it, known as algorithms.

Profit Increased 1.3% For Year

Renters LONDON — Beecham Group PLC said Thursday that it had decided to concentrate on its core businesses of health and personal care and dispose of most of its operations outside these sectors. The company said it would seek offers for its home-improvements business, which is based mainly in Britain, France and West Germany, and would also sell its Findlater, Mackie, Todd wines and spirits division and its U.S. cosmetics business, Germaine Monteil. Beecham also announced Wednesday that pretax profit for the year rose 1.3 percent to £303.8 million ($464 million), from a re-stated £299.8 million a year earlier. Revenue for the year rose 13.5 per-cent, to £2.60 billion, from £2.29 billion. Per-share earnings rose slightly to 23.16 pence from 23.01. Beecham, in commenting on the planned sales, said its priority would be to restore its prescriptionmedicines business to a consistently high level of growth. John Robb, group chief executive, said the units to be sold account for less than 10 percent of revenue. He declined to give details of how much the sale of the compa-mes was expected to realize.

Lord Keith, the chairman, said that proceeds would be used to reduce borrowings. He said that negotiations on Germaine Monteil were under way and that the company had received inquiries about the home-improvements business.

He denied persistent market and press speculation that Beecham could become the target of a takeover bid. "I have not, repeat not, been approached by anybody of a serious nature," he said.

The company said it had spent £287.1 million in its fiscal year on acquisitions, £255.1 million of which related to the purchase of Norclif Thayer, the health-care unit of Revion Inc.

Beecham shares gained 3 pence on the London Stock Exchange Thursday, rising to 396 from Wednesday's close of 393.

Skin Care: Little New Under the Sun Headliners in the Sunscreen Market

Many Brands Of Sunscreen but Few Differences

By Lisa Belkin New York Times Service
NEW YORK — Once upon a time, there was suntan lotion. . Now there are lotions and monsses, gels and sticks, creams and polishers, all available in different strengths to offer varying degrees of protection from the

The outpouring is one clear sign of the explosion in consum-er interest in sun blockers. This comes amid widespread warnmes that baking in the sun causes cancer and wrinkles, and the much-publicized removals of cancerous skin growths from the faces of President Ronald Resgan, his wife Nancy, and Vice President George Bush.

But the variety of sim products being stuffed into beach bags and picnic baskets also demonstrates how producers are searching for ways to distinguish themselves in a field that has suddenly grown crowded. The challenge, as even industry executives concede, is that when it comes to blocking out the sun, there is effectively no difference in the new products.

They all work, and they all work well: a sunscreen is a sunscreen is a sunscreen," said Joseph Gubernick, senior vice president of technology for Estee Lauder Inc. The company owns Estée Lauder, Clinique, Aramis and Prescriptives cosmetics, and has brought out three new sun care lines in the last two years.

What is happening with sun. products has happened with many a consumer product. In-deed, John Czepiel, an associate professor of marketing at the New York University Graduate School of Business; calls the sunproducts industry a textbook example of the evolution of a prod-

There's a critical mass at which a market becomes large enough to segment itself and cater to tiny groups," he said. "As the market gets larger, the one-size-fits-all brand loses."

The heightened concern of consumers about skin cancer and aging from the sun has given manufacturers a reason to expand their product lines," added Allan G. Mottus, a consultant to the coametics industry.

And expanding is what they are doing. Sun products, more than 60 percent of which are sold between June and September, have become a $300-million industry, one that has grown by 10 to 12 percent a year for the last

Nearly all of that growth has been in the area of sunscreen products, which retard burning and therefore increase the amount of time a person can stay in the sun, as opposed to suntan products, which provide no sun protection. A study by the Path-mark supermarket chain found that sales of suntan products were flat between 1980 and 1985, while sales of sunscreens and sunblocks increased 70 percent.

One impetus for this growth was a 1978 proposal by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration that all smscreens carry a "sun protection factor," or SPF num-ber. The proposed numbers range from 2 to 15, and indicate the strength of the protection provided by the product. An SPF of 15, for example, means that the user can spend 15 hours in the sun and absorb the same burning or tanning rays that a nonuser would absorb in one

Though the proposed numbers have not yet become law, they have apparently helped win the confidence of the public. Sunscreens now seem to carry a sci-entific cachet. Where they were once pitched as the route to a deep, dark tan, they are now promoted as protection from the ravages of the sun.

"A dark tan is seen as unhealthy," said Barbara Cooperman, director of marketing for Bain de Soleil, of that company's recent decision to change the shade of the models in its ads. "A more-golden color suggests that you got it slowly and carefully, It's a healthier look."

Though the word "cancer" does not appear on product packages, it is implied. "Cancer See SUNSCREENS, Page 18

sales slipped 0.1 percent in May, reflecting continuing low consumer prices and an unexpected slowing of auto and housing-materials sales, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

In a separate survey, the Commerce Department said U.S. businesses planned to spend 1.3 percent less this year than in 1985 on capital goods. The cutbacks are central tered in the mining and petroleum industries, which have been affected by the collapse of oil prices.

Two retail sectors that expanded rapidly in April, auto and housing materials, slowed markedly to the surprise of analysts who had ex-

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches
NEW YORK — The president of Trans World Airlines said
Thursday that he had been forced to resign unexpectedly after an eight-month tenure because of friction with a senior deputy of the troubled carrier's chairman, Carl C. Icahn.

"I think there was some confusion among employees as to who the boss was," Richard D. Pearson said a day after TWA had said be had resigned.

Mr. Pearson said his departure stemmed from a conflict of authority with TWA's vice chairman, D. oseph Corr. Mr. Corr was brought in by Mr. Icahn, a New York financier, after he took control of the airline earlier this year.

Mr. Pearson said that Mr. Corr had asked for his resignation. "Obviously, Mr. Icahn is going to go with the horse be brought in," Mr. Pearson added.

Although his departure was amiable, he said, it came unexpectedly.

Asked his plans, he said, "I don't have any right now because I hadn's planned on leaving. I'm an airline gry and I'd like to stay in

The departure of Mr. Pearson, a veteran TWA employee, came amid a turbulent period in which TWA has endured a takeover fight, large financial losses, a flight-attendants strike and slumping business caused by fear of terrorism abroad.

"Dick Pearson more than made good his promise to stay on and help me through the transition," said Mr. Icahn's statement al positions in TWA, including vice Wednesday announcing the resignation. "In addition, Dick's efforts were indispensable in returning TWA to normal operations during the flight-attendants strike."

BOMBAY - Indian stock markets have regained buoyancy and ended the uncertainty of the past three months, when prices of most popular shares plunged on widespread selling.

Expectations of another bumper harvest after good monsoon rains and the recent withdrawal of barsh budgetary measures helped revive the stock market, Kirti Parekh, a stockbroker, said.

LONDON - Britain's unemployment rate rose to 13.3 percent of the work force in May from 13.2 percent in April, the government said Thursday. It was the sixth consecutive monthly increase.

Department of Employment statistics adjusted to account for seasonal variations put the number of adults out of work at 3,208,600, an increase of 5,600 from April.

The actual number of unem-ployed fell by 54,166, to 3,270,892 in May, but the government relies on the seasonally adjusted figures as a better guide to trends. Officials said seasonal factors should continue to benefit the employment situation until the end of June, but that the end of the school year would bring school leavers to is a limit to the number of flights that grid pattern can support.

Moreover, by confining itself to those areas, America West is extraordinarily vulnerable if another airline moves in on its turf. Several analysts suggest that the airline's only safe course is to bedge its bets with other routes. Mr. Conway says America West might set up a "minihub elsewhere" once the market is

But those problems are in the future. For now, America West is soaring. Last year it netted an $11.4-million profit on revenues of $241 million, after a loss of $15.4 million on revenues of $122.6 million in 1984, its first full year of

By comparison, People Express lost $27.5 million on revenues of $977.9 million last year, compared with a tiny profit of $1.6 million on revenues of $586.8 million in 1984.

America West operates 66 flights to California daily and flies to Los Angeles from Phoenix every 50 minutes from 6 A.M. to 9 P.M. America West and Southwest both charge $39 for the flight, but America West offers complimentary sandwiches, alcoholic and nonalcoholic drinks and free copies of The Wall Street Journal. The amenities, combined with the frequent departures, have attracted many business travelers - one of the company's primary aims, said Mark Coleman, senior vice president of market

Before America West's entry into the market, air travel between some Western cities was expensive. Mr. Beauvais said, for example, that passengers wanting to go from Wichita, Kansas, to Los Angeles would have had to go via Dallas or Denver, at a cost of $390. America West charges $145 and offers a round-trip fare of $198.

For flights that originate or end in Phoenix, the price differential is even more dramatic. For example, before 1983 passengers wanting to fly from Colorado Springs to Phoenix would have flown to Denver onton, Alberta, and west to lirst, and paid a one-way fare of three months over a Disney depart of titles in California. But there close to $200. America West flies mand that any disputes over 92.

Although America West does compete with the majors on specific routes - for example, with Unit-

public stock offering -not an easy

Los Angeles route - it has steered clear of Dallas, Denver and other large cities whose airports are dominated by major carriers. "There was no reason for us to take the majors on in their strengths," Mr. Conway said. "The service in those cities was already sufficient. That stands in marked contrast to the tack People Express took when it moved into Denver, Dallas and Houston, "People Express went into all the major hub centers, and it's one of the factors that has contributed to their condition today," Mr. Conway said. That is not the way People Express sees it. Robert Sharak, team manager of marketing, says its profits plummeted last year be-cause it had not yet digested three carriers it had acquired, and because of fare wars in many of its markets. Mr. Sharak says the profit setback was temporary. America West, in contrast, says it is content to be the major player only in Phoenix, at least for a while. It plans to donble its fleet over the next few years and to add service to 20 more cities. As for competition, Mr. Conway suggests that the com-bined clont of Southwest and America West will keep other air-"If United made it top priority to establish a hub in Phoenix it would have an impact on us, but it would not be an end-all," Mr. Conway said. "They'd be looking at two highly efficient carriers that between the two of them have 188 departures in Phoenix each day. and cost per seat-mile of roughly 6 cents. That is powerful to go up

Manville Stockholders Ask Court for Election

The Associated Press NEW YORK — Manville Corp. stockholders, fighting to quash a bankruptcy reorganization, urged a federal appeals court Thursday to force Manville to elect new directors.

George Hahn, an attorney for the stockholders, told the 2d U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the company's management "engaged in steady warfare against the equity interests" in agreeing to a reorganization plan that favored Manville's company and the standard the standard of Manville's commercial creditors and thousands

Traders Derive Little Direction From U.S. Data

By David Ress

Reuters LONDON — Eurobonds generally closed steady to slightly firmer Thursday, with news of a decline in U.S. retail sales in May not seen as providing a strong enough indication of prospects for interest-rate declines, dealers said.

"People are just not really convinced that the U.S. economy will remain sluggish and so clear the way for lower rates, despite the 0.1percent decline in retail sales, said a

A Bundesbank spokeswoman confirmed in Frankfurt that calendar periods for mark Euroboads will be changed to semi-monthly beginning July 1, from the present monthly list. Market sources had carlier reported the alteration.

Calendar periods are 1 to 15 of the month and 16 to the final day. In both cases banks must register issues by the evening two working days before the start of the corresponding calendar period. The spokesman confirmed that the Bundesbank no longer intends to publish the calendar. It has until now given details of the number of issues registered and volume.

U.S. M-1 Figure Up $2.7 Billion

NEW YORK -The narrowest measure of the U.S. money supply, M-1, rose $2.7 billion to seasonally adjusted $663.2 billion in the week ended June , the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said Thursday. The rise was within most forecasts.

The Fed said that the previous week's M-1 level was left unrevised at $660.5 billion, while the four-week moving average rose to $659.7 billion from $657.5 billion. The Fed also reported that the broader M-2 aggregate rose $26.1 billion in May, while the M-3 aggre-gate rose $18.1 billion.

The average forecast of econ-omists predicted a $2.1-billion increase in M-1, with forecasts ranging from no change to a $4.4-billion rise. M-1 comprises cash in circulation, checking accounts and nonbank travelers

Dollar Eases Lower in Europe, U.S.

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK - The dollar slipped fractionally lower in quiet European and U.S. trading Thursday, but dealers said the currency remained vulnerable to a major sell-off and might test the 2.15 Deutsche mark level before long.

"There may be pressure mounting on the dollar" because of further evidence of weakness in the economy, said Jeffrey Mondschein, a trader with Merrill Lynch International.

He and other analysts noted that Thursday's report of a 0.1-percent The British pound fall in U.S. retail sales had little $1.5285 from $1.5275. impact on trading, although it added to worries over the pace of U.S. economic growth.

"When the dollar had strengthened a few weeks ago there was a feeling the economy may also strengthen," said Nicholas Sargen of Salomon Brothers. "But given the latest news, the unemployment and retail sales figures, obviously there are more questions, and further confirmation that the second quarter is sluggish."

In New York, the dollar eased to WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Thomas that a record number of U.S. banks are expensed to fail or require federal financial assistant by the end of the year.

L. William Scidman said at a meeting of the United States League of Savings Insumination that 140 to 160 banks would fail or need assistance in 1986, up from last year's record of Diance in 1986, up from last year, Mr. Scidman estimated that about 120 banks would fail it year. He said the midyear adjustment reflects the continuing increase in the number of insuminated that about 120 banks would fail its year. He said the midyear adjustment reflects that its and the actual number of failures after this year."

He said that as of June 9, 55 banks had failed or required assistance, surpassing 43 failures than 1,300 banks are on the FDIC's problem bank list now, up from 1,140 at the end of 198, he said.

Mr. Seidman said the increase in the number of banks on the problem list reflected problems confronting oil and gas industry lenders, one timuing weakness in agriculture and in the continercial and real estate market.

He said the FDIC would reserve about I billion for failures and assistance agreements.

MURROW: His Life and Times By A.M. Sperber, 795 pages. $22.95.

Freundlich Books, 80 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Reviewed by Jonathan Yardley

E DWARD R. MURROW worked in broadcasting, the most evanescent of all news media, and his tangible legacy is predictably small: scratchy radio tapes, blurred televi-sioo films, a published collection of his pieces that occasionally can be found in used-book stores. Yet his actual legacy, the one that lives on in the hearts of journalists and listeners alike, remains remarkably large two decades after his death. Not merely was he the greatest journalist ever to work in broadcasting indeed, the only "great" journalist broadcast-ing has thus far produced — but he was for millions of Americans a figure of conscience, rectitude and professional integrity, who estab-lished standards against which reputable broadcasters still measure themselves and against which listeners and viewers still mea-

This being the case, it is a real pity that the Murrow biography being represented as "definitive" comes close to being a case study in how not to write biography. "Murrow: His Life and Times" is a well-intentioned book by a woman whose admiration for her subject is intense, but the heavens do not contain enough good intentions to paper over the shortcom-ings: her insistence on battering the reader with every trivial detail her research has uncovered, her interminable descriptions of individ-ual hroadcasts and political maneuverings at CBS, her inability to distill protracted episodes down to the core of their meaning, her cloying, cliche-ridden, saccharine prose - and, worst of all, her utter failure to analyze the style and content of Murrow's journalism. The broad details of Murrow's life and career are familiar to most people old enough to remember him; it is remarkable how little this accumulation of factoids helps to broaden our understanding. He was born in North Carolina in 1908, moved to the Pacific Northwest as a boy, and lived in a state of near-poverty that left him with a lifelong sympathy for the de-prived. He came to journalism somewhat by accident, after jobs that encouraged his interest m public and foreign affairs, but once he got to CBS be took little time to show what he could do. His broadcasts from England during World War II brought the realities bome to Americans with almost unbearable intimacy and had much to do with swinging American scutiment away from isolationism.

After the war came television, with which Murrow was oever really comfortable but in which he nevertheless distinguished himself His "See It Now" was probably the most serious and accomplished regular news program ever produced for commercial television; surely no one needs to be told that it was one such program about Joseph McCarthy in March 1954 that crystallized public and senatorial opposition to the rogue elephant from Wisconsin. Gradually, though, television news came under the purview of the advertisers and entertainers, and there wasn't much of a place left for one so committed to true journalism as was Murrow. He did several fine documentaries for CBS Reports, but when he had a chance to escape, he seized it. In 1961 he accepted John F. Kennedy's invitation to run the U.S. Information Agency, a job for which he was not really suited, but to which he gave his best efforts. In 1965 he died of lung cancer, killed off by the cigarettes that, along with his inimitable voice, had been his trademark.

He was at once the right man and the wrong man for his times. When he entered hroadcast journalism, it was an infant medium with no preconceptions about how its husiness should be done. The instinct of those running it was that the news should be covered seriously; Murrow, with his training at the Institute of International Education and his wide acquaintance among leaders at home and broad, was exactly the kind of young man CBS was looking for. During the war, when Americans were desperate for reliable informa-tion from overseas, Murrow gave them that and more: without ever trivializing the oews, he gave it a human dimension. And as head of CBS's European news operation, he recruited the best broadcast oews team ever assembled: William L. Shirer, Charles Collingwood, Eric Sevareid, Howard K. Smith, David Schoenbrun - they and their other associates remain four decades later, the model of what broadcast news can do, and has not done since.
But then the war ended, and Murrow could see what was coming. "He thought it already apparent," a friend said, "that the expansion, commercialism and impending advent of TV were all going to make oews increasingly the servant of entertainment and commerce." He was right. Though Murrow did make one accommodation to the oew age - his popular television program, "Person to Person," which made him both a celebrity and a wealthy man but he never adjusted to its debased terms. Almost overnight, the man who had been in the right place in the right time became a pariah. His old friends in the corporate offices still thought he was a hell of a fellow, but they couldn't find much air time for him. His last years, at CBS and at USIA, were not happy. His health was deteriorating, but what really pained him was that there was oo longer a place for him. How poignant it is to read what he said in 1961, as be was leaving for Washington, to Richard Salant, who was moving into the leadership of the CBS News Division: "Dick, you're just where I was when f started, I wasn't a journalist either; but you love it, and that's that. All you have to do is love the news." But by 1961 there was no longer a place in the news for Ed Murrow; surely that, as much as the cigarettes, is what killed him.

NEW YORK — After Ronald Reagan's big political success. I naturally assumed that actors would rush to cash in on the public's appetite for greasepaint gov-ernment. But except for Clint Eastwood getting elected mayor of Carmel, California, there has been no significant trend boding new political career opportunities for thespians I hope nobody will ask what a significant trend is, or how a trend can bode, or how anything can bode career opportunities, or why I say "thespians" when I mean actors. This is a column about politics; it is not supposed to be written in English.

Suppose I said, "Whatever happened to Charlion Heston and Paul Newman? Weren't they supposed to run against each other for president after Ronald Reagan was

It wouldn't sound like a very deep political column, would it? You'd say. "I'm not going to waste my time reading political columns by a man who doesn't even quote insiders' and 'veteran political has-

So let's move on: Shrewd political observers were saying a year or two back that Hes-ton and Newman should not be overlooked as possible presidential rivals in 1988. After all, both were movie actors with performance skills the public had begun to expect of its leaders.

What's more, their discussion of nuclear-weapons strategy in 1984 showed that both had a good understanding of a complex subject, which was more than anybody has ever said of Reagan.

And don't ask who the abovementioned shrewd political observers were. They couldn't have been me, since I can't talk polities for 30 seconds without falling asleep.

Come to think of it, though, I did see the Heston-Newman TV guest shots on nuclear strategy and was so impressed with both that I might indeed have been the "shrewd political observers" who said they shouldn't be overlooked. One of them, maybe Heston, seemed to take the conservative line associated with Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle, while the other

- was it Newman? - took the customary liberal position.

Maybe it was the other way around. Not that it matters, since neither has emerged as a potential candidate. Nor has anyone else from screen, stage or video tube. Not even Sylvester Stallone. This is not surprising. When you are king of the box office, what sane person would prefer a job where you have to think about the Middle East and eat breakfast regularly with congressmen?

I go on about the lack of performing artists on the political scene only because it contrasts with the situation we find when we turn to the clergy. The heavyweight political columnists, the kind who start covering presidential cam-paigns six years before election day, are saying that the Reverend Jesse Jackson and the Reverend Pat (no disrespect; he likes the regular-guy nickname treatment) Robertson will be vital forces to contend with in the 1988 election.

(No. I don't know what "vital forces to contend with" means either. The best translation is probably, "Careful! With the slightest encouragement both will run.")

Jackson is a Democrat: Robertson's political activities have concentrated on the Republican Party. A Jackson vs. Robertson contest would create an American political first: a campaign in which God was on both sides.

Right honorable as well as left honorable clergy are not, however, the only unusual trades likely to be represented in the forthcoming competition.

Professional football will be in the race, in the person of Representative Jack Kemp, who quarter-hacked the Buffalo team before discovering the blessings of supply-side economics. The espionage business will be represented by George Bush, a one-time director of the CIA. He is also a vice president, of course, but since vice presidents running for president always lose, Bush will probably want to improve his chances by running as a spy.

Then there is Lee Iacocca, representing both the auto industry and the Statue of Liberty. Put them together and it sounds to me like an unbeatable third party. No wonder Stallone prefers not to run.

A Victim — and Survivor — of Yalta

By Sue Armstrong forced them into the train at bayonet point.

D UNDEE, Scotland - Zoe Polanska-Palmer is smiling and talkative, and only a faint accent suggests she has not spent all her life in the comfortable suburb of Dundee where she lives. In fact she was born in the Ukraine and as a teen-ager during World War II experienced the horrors that are the subject of "Yalta Victim," a short autobiography recently issued by Mainstream

Zoe Polanska was one of the For many years no one would credit what she told them — not few Soviet citizens in a refugee camp in Austria at end of the war even her husband, Arthur Palmto escape forcible repatriation to the Soviet Union under one of the er, a Canadian serviceman she had met in Austria. "He just agreements reached at the Yalta didn't believe British soldiers Conference in February 1945. The agreement was that Soviet citizens outside their country when the war ended should be sent back. Some were Cossacks, whose treatment under Lenin and Stalin had driven them to side with the Germans during the war. Others were wives, children or old people who had followed the men into exile, or people, like Zoe Polanska, who had been scattered by the fighting after the Germans invaded the Soviet Union. She describes scenes among the Cossacks in the camp at Lienz, near the Italian border, as the in the Soviet Union died mystericamaraderie between them and ously soon after. Fear of further the British soldiers running the camp gave way to disbelief at word of repatriation, then panic.

In May 1945, a group of Cossack officers was driven off in trucks, ostensibly to meet the British commander. "Only one came back. I remember the front of his turnic looked like red velvet, but it was blood and he was dying. But before he died be managed to say that the officers had been tricked and simply handed over to the Soviets, who had snarled at them like wild wolves and then shot them in the woods.

"When I realized that would he my fate, too, I felt such despair. What had I done wrong to justify being killed by my own people?"
Those remaining determined to resist repatriation. They clung together in the camp square, wav-ing scraps of black material and singing Russian hymns. When the orders came to board the train, no one moved. The British lieve in taking your own life unsoldiers, many obviously ap-palled at what they had to do, er considered just letting go. Even

In the melee, Zoe and a friend called Tonia escaped and hid in the brush near a farm. The farmer betrayed them. Zoe and Tonia were thrown onto a heap of distraught and wounded people in cattle cars — and that was the last Zoe saw of her friend. Zoe's badly cut knees were noticed by a British Army doctor, who pulled her from the train as the doors began to shut. A forged identity card saved her from the next convoy.

were capable of such acts. He and the few others I tried to tell thought my experiences in the Nazi camps had deranged my mind and I was away with the fairies. That hurt me very much." An advertisement in the Daily Telegraph broke the silence for her. Nicholas Bethell, a parliamentarian who had unearthed disturbing information about Yalta, was looking for witnesse for a book. Zoe became a central figure in Bethell's book, "The Last Secret," but the price was high. She learned that her brother reprisals prevented her from pub-lishing her story until other possi-ble victims had all died. Her first memory of war was being caught between advancing German units and the Red Army at her home near Odessa. Their farmhouse was requisitioned by German officers, who took everything. Zoe was 13 when the SS rounded up ber and neighboring youngsters and sent them to Auschwitz. Her last sight of home was of ber mother bending over her father, who had been knocked down for trying to resist her ab-duction. "I think if I'd been older

She believes that young people should understand the depths to which human beings can sink, and what happens when people stop questioning the assumptions and actions of their leaders. She is appalled that Auschwitz could have been established under the noses of ordinary people, ap-pailed that the United Nations could have put a value of $980 compensation on the loss of her childhood — and withheld even that because the camps yielded no records to support her claim.

She never gave up the hope of seeing her mother again. Her chance came in 1961 when she joined a delegation to a trade fair in Moscow as an interpreter. She left Dundee with tremendous misgivings. Mail to her relatives scarcely ever got past the Soviet authorities. Besides, she had had an unnerving visit in Scotland from two Soviet agents.

Although Zoe's mother had received no notice of her arrival in Moscow, she visited the trade fair on the hunch that she might find her daughter. After 18 years of separation the two were reunited for only four hours. Her mother urged her to write her story.

It has taken a long time, and Polanska-Palmer is not sure it has brought her any nearer to understanding why such things happen. "I read James Joyce's description of hell as being a stretch of burn-ing fire. I think I've experienced bell on earth, but I got out without being burned to a cinder. That's the nearest I can get to explaining it."
